

Abstract

5 A method and system for administering a secure, Internet based examination at remote sites is disclosed. The examination is dynamic and potentially adaptive. During the examination session, the state of the examination is maintained with the use of cookies, which are updated and stored on the central server at a predefined interval during the examination. Individual examination sessions may be restored to their previous state in the event of a malfunction.

000000-12229900